On a national level, the data generated from the NCEMS is the property of the NGB. Provincial regulators have access to information relevant to each jurisdiction whilst gambling operators exchange and have access to information relevant to their respective estates.

As such, Route Monitoring has daily access to third party trade secrets, intellectual property, personal and confidential information. Due to prevailing privacy regulation in South Africa, Route Monitoring is under regulatory duty to ensure the safe and proper use, storage and dissemination of such information.

The purpose of this Manual is to provide assistance, as envisaged in the PAIA, to potential Requesters with regard to the procedure to be followed when requesting access to records held by Route Monitoring. This Manual gives effect to the constitutional right to privacy, by safeguarding personal information when processed and requested by a responsible party, subject to justifiable limitations that are aimed at balancing the right to privacy against other rights, particularly the right of access to information and protecting important interests, including the free flow of information within the Republic and across international borders.

This manual aims to define the responsibilities and duties of Route Monitoring and Requesters.

The records held by Route Monitoring are available by means of a Request as set out in Clause 4.

Route Monitoring reserves the right to refuse providing information where such information falls under a specified exemption as set out in Chapter 4 of the PAIA.
